He Was Representative of American Type Rather Than Typical American

WAS A NOISY INFANT

Born in Oolagh, Indian Territory, November 4, 1879

(This is the first installment on the life of Will Rogers by James E. Brown. This writer, who has lived in the West, the South, and New England, will attempt to interpret Rogers as the representative of the typical American.)

By James E. Brown
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(INS)— Nothing so stamped Will Rogers as a fitted representative of the typical American as the fact that his parents wanted him to be a minister.

Every American boy grows up with his parents fondly indulging in dreams of him thundering from the pulpit either as a minister, priest, or rabbi.
It seems to be an inevitable part of the American scene: it happened to me, and it probably happened to you.

In the case of Will Rogers' lovable predecessor, Mark Twain, the same was true—until the time when he ran away from home, at which occasion a relative somewhat profanely predicted that he would be hanged as a horse-thief.

A great many of Rogers' biographers make the mistake of calling him a typical American; he was not. He was an excellent representative, a sort of super-spokesman, but he was not typical.

He had the homely humor of the Southern cracker-barrel artist, the shrewd penetration of the New England farmer, and the breezy indifference to rank and wealth of the Western plainsman.

As one who has lived in all those communities, I know the type.

We had a boy in college who hailed from Oklahoma. Will's home state, getting tight regularly and raising the devil. The boy nevertheless had a straight "A" average in all his studies.
His favorite expression was, "I mean we careth not!"

Maybe he didn't care, and maybe Will Rogers was just a cow-boy, wistful and friendly, who stumbled on the "big time" by accident, but he too had a straight "A" average—not in college, but in the game of life.

Born in Oolagh, Indian territory, on November 4, 1879, he had a flair for doing things. With that characteristic for the unusual and the significant, he was born on Election Day. What better day could the man who kidded presidents, senators, ambassadors and kings have chosen!

Yet he was a noisy baby. When he cried, there was no ignoring him. That same nasal tone was evident as a child which later enabled him to imitate Calvin Coolidge with such accuracy.
He once said to Mrs. Coolidge:

"Well, Grace, you can imitate him better than I can. But look what you had to go through to be able to do it."

He was educated at the Willie Hassell School at Neosho, Missouri, and at the Kemper Military Academy at Boonville, Missouri, but, as he later said:

"It didn't do me any harm much."

He claimed to have gotten the main part of his education from McGuffey's fourth reader.

"I studied it for ten years," he remarked afterwards.

He learned to rope and ride while he was a ranch hand in Oklahoma, and he made his first public appearance when he was 14 years old in a riding contest which he won.

He grew up on horseback, became a cow-puncher when he was 17 and soon owned a small herd of his own which he sold to a neighbor and, with another youth, bought third class tickets to the Argentine to seek his fortune.

Down there, they punched cows across the Pampas for $4 a month—American money. Soon they became tired of this, but they had only enough money for one passage home so they

GRANGE ACCUSES THE EARLE ADMINISTRATION

Says Governor Is "Fighting Farmer Organizations"
In State

CITES THE INCIDENTS

HARRISBURG, Aug. 20.—The Pennsylvania State Grange, with thousands of members in practically every county of the State, openly accuses officials of the Earle Administration of "fighting farmer organizations" throughout Pennsylvania.

The Grange gives names and cites incidents to prove its charges in a recently issued booklet entitled "Legislative Activities of the State Grange," containing also the open allegation that the new milk laws were enacted for the most part over the protests of milk producers and are not in accord with what the Grange, leader in many milk fights, believes are the best interests of the farmer.

Concluding a lengthy discussion of the blunt and arbitrary manner in which the Earle Administration treated the farmers in their attempts to have the milk bills comply with their needs, the Grange in its legislative report says:

"This obvious mis-information (a magazine article relating to the signing of the Milk Control Bill) is cited as a typical example of the tactics and mis-information which was spread broadcast by those connected with the Administration who have fought the Grange and Grange policies.

"Those who have led the Administration forces in fighting farmer organizations include Polikoff, a Deputy Attorney General; Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Milk Sanitation in the Department of Health, whose tactics in fighting farmer organizations need no explanation to farmers in Southeastern Pennsylvania; Reynolds, also known to the farmers of Northeastern Pennsylvania, who was appointed to the original Milk Control Board by Governor Pinchot and later dismissed by him, and who has since been reappointed by Governor Earle and dismissed by him; Marburger, appointed by Governor Earle and dismissed by him; Westrick, of Cambria county, Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture in the House and Smith, of Cumberland county, a member of the House."

"Never before in the history of the State Grange has a political crowd so attempted to use the order," the report continues, citing former efforts of the kind, and continuing: "Bitter as they were, however, there was not in those days the open attack on the Grange which has occurred during the past few months; and never before has there been a campaign so financed by taxpayers' money or otherwise, to send malicious mis-information to our Grange members."

The Executive Committee of the Grange, in issuing the report, adds:
"We believe the common sense of the rank and file of the Grange membership will satisfactorily adjust these matters in due time," which is a most diplomatic way of saying that in coming elections Grangers will best serve their own interests by taking a whack at the Democratic Administration and its candidates when they go to the polls.

WAR THREAT ENDS PLEASANT SOCIAL LIFE OF FOREIGNERS ENJOYED IN ETHIOPIA CAPITAL

Racing, Favorite Sport of Em peror, Offered Colorful Spectacle and Fun for the Europeans

This is the last of a series by a distinguished woman who recently visited Ethiopia.

By Edna Lee Booker
(Copyright, 1935, I. N. S.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(INS)—Social life among the foreigners living in Addis Ababa has come to an abrupt end.

Horse races, polo games, tennis matches, dinner parties, picnics which go to make up a pleasant existence among the diplomatic set and business representatives in that delightful city have stopped.

Because of threats of war with Italy; the ever-growing number of unfortunate incidents and atrocities against foreigners in various districts in Ethiopia; the danger of food supplies being cut off; the influx of half disciplined feudal chiefs and their thousands of retainers into the capital, foreign women and children are leaving Addis Ababa as fast as the uncertain trains will take them.

Many have had to wait for passage on the crowded boats going to Europe for several weeks as hundreds of wealthy native families are leaving the country as well.

The torrential rains are current and this always makes travel from the interior difficult.

Addis Ababa reminds one of a Southern California foothill city in many ways, and in peace times is a delightful place in which to live.

With its purple mountains, eucalyptus trees, bougainvillea covered white homes, pleasant climate together with its colorful native bazars, pagentry of court life and international features it has a distinct appeal.

Dinner parties in Addis Ababa are most formal affairs.

An ordinary dinner means a dinner jacket, while a diplomatic function requires long tails and all the buttons and badges and stripes and ribbons a man can muster. The farther they extend across the chest the better.

The women wear lovely gowns from Paris and are very smart.

There is champagne and many,
many courses and marvelous servings.

Even before the days of motor cars, and there are only some 500 odd cars in Addis Ababa today, and the guests had to travel on mule back to reach a dinner party—they were always formal affairs.

Addis Ababa, like Washington, is a city of great distances. And no one thinks anything of going from one hill top to another hill top for a party.
Amusing tales are told of men wearing riding trousers and a dinner jacket—very conventional above the table. Of women, arriving on mule back with a native servant carrying evening gown and slippers in an overnight bag.

Lately there was a gay night club, with an Armenian orchestra playing jazz.

The horse races, which are held semi-annually, and attended by many hundred native enthusiasts as well as the foreigners, are attended by the emperor.

The former Empress had a wonderful gold and red throne at the race course. She would arrive, heavily veiled, upon her richly decked mule, accompanied by a large retinue.

The present Emperor and Empress are keen racing fans. In great state they drive to the course bringing their children and always attended by a large bodyguard.

Vote Democratic and Get a Relief Job

HARRISBURG, Aug. 20.—"Vote Democratic and get a relief job; vote Republican and get a regular job; that is the real issue of the Fall campaign in Pennsylvania," State Chairman M.
Harvey Taylor said today.

"Voters who desire to get rid of the Democratic Administration at Washington next year can make an excellent start this year by laying the foundation for a Republican victory in 1936 by electing Republican local officials in 1935," he continued.

"It may easily happen that the elections of next year will be decided in thousands of local voting booths this coming November.

It is, therefore, highly essential that Republicans think seriously as to the nominations they are about to make, in order that the best candidates possible be selected in September.

"The Republican party has experience in government, and steady hands are now required at the helm. The Republican party is sound in principles, and soundness in government is never more sorely needed in America than at this moment. The Republican party is the majority party in a large majority of our counties and it has only to present to the people men of high standing pledged to efficiency and honesty in the administration of office to win.

"There is a growing tide of resentment against the shilly-shallying uncertainties of a National Administration that is doing more to retard recovery than it is to help. There is now a very clear understanding that if the Democratic Administration is to be endorsed, Pennsylvania will be a bankrupt commonwealth in another two years.

"Change in registration from the Republican to the Democratic party represents the shift of those voters who never were really Republican, but registered so merely in the hope of getting some personal consideration from the party in power. Registration in Pennsylvania continues to be heavily Republican.

"Voters who desire to continue present uncertainties of business and employment will vote Democratic this Fall. In doing so they will vote for relief jobs. Voters who desire a return of stability and prosperity, will vote for Republican candidates. By so doing they will vote in favor of regular jobs—and regular jobs are what thousands of our people, weary of the dole and relief work at starvation wages, want. The Democratic party has promised them jobs, and has given them the dole. The Republican party remains, as ever, the hope of the country in a time of adversity. A vote for a Republican candidate the coming Fall will be a vote for the return of prosperity."

Chairman Taylor added that from almost every county he is receiving reports of a highly encouraging nature.

TWENTY-FOUR GIRLS AT LEADERSHIP SCHOOL

Group From Bucks County Attends Sessions At
State College

AWARDED BLUE RIBBONS

By RHANDENA A. ARMSTRONG
(Home Economics Representative)

Twenty-four girls from Bucks County attended the Leadership school and 4-H Club Week at the Pennsylvania State College.

All of the girls entered the judging contests and for excellence in judging aprons, pajamas and stocking darts, Margaret Lapp of New Britain and Catherine Benner of Passer, were awarded blue ribbons. For judging dresses, Mildred Beer of Bedminster Township won a blue ribbon. Cecily DeSilver, of Sprintown, won second place in the judging of outfits and Catherine Reitter of Buckaville won second award, red ribbon, in the judging of canning. Emma Moyer of near Kellers Church won third award, white ribbon, in the judging of cakes, muffins and yeast bread. Dorothy Wol-finger and Jane Kramer, both of Plumsteadville, won third place awards in the judging of room furnishings.

There were 94 prizes given to 500 entrants in the judging contests. Out of this number, Bucks County's delegation of 24 girls won 7 awards.

In the class for outfits made and worn by the girls in the Style Show, three girls were entered. Lela Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rice,

Troubles Confront President

Washington, D. C., Aug. 20.—Trouble on policies on widely separated fronts combined to harrass President Roosevelt today as he urged Congress on to adjournment in five days, and simultaneously gave thought to a Saturday night radio broadcast that will have the effect of opening his campaign for re-election.

From Detroit a delegation of housewives invaded Washington to condemn the high price of meat, and charge that it is due to the AAA processing tax.

New England is also assailing the processing tax, claiming it shut down the mills.

Inversely, down South they are clamoring for a 12 cent government loan on cotton. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, and AAA Administrator Chester Davis have protested such action would open the doors for demands for like treatment from growers of other commodities.

Discordant elements in New York City and elsewhere have attempted to stir up work relief strikes against the security wage being paid by the Works Progress Administration.

PROMINENT REALTOR DIES; ILL LONG TIME

James F. Blanche Succumbs
To Nine Months'
Illness

LIFE-LONG RESIDENT

James F. Blanche, for many years one of the leading real estate and insurance brokers of Bristol, died at his residence, 325 Radcliffe street, last evening at 11.25 at the age of 59 years.
Mr. Blanche had been confined to his home and hospitals since last November.

Mr. Blanche was a native of Bristol and resided here all of his life. He was the son of the late James J. and Jane Blanche.

He started his business career with the firm of Glikson & James and then became teller with the Farmers National Bank; later entering the real estate and insurance business on his own account, and, since 1921 has been a partner in the firm of Eastburn & Blanche.

Mr. Blanche was prominent in the business, social and fraternal life of his native town. He was treasurer of and an active officer of Bristol Council, No. 906, Knights of Columbus, for the past 25 years; member of the Archbishop Ryan Assembly, Fourth Degree K. of C., secretary of the Townsite Building & Loan Association since its organization, treasurer of the Merchants & Mechanics Building Association, a director of the Union Building & Loan Association, and a member of the Bristol Lodge of Elks and the Bristol Exchange Club.

His advice and assistance were constantly in demand by people in many walks of life and he gave generously of his time and experience.

The survivors are his immediate family: Frances A. Blanche, his wife, and five children, James F. Blanche, Jr., Ruth, Albert, Mary Frances and Betty. Four sisters and two brothers also survive.

The funeral will be Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

MURDERS A COW

MIDDLETOWN, R. I.—(INS)— Frank Peckham does not like a musical accompaniment to his sleep—especially when the music is provided by a cowbell. After several nights of the serenades, Peckham grabbed a carving knife, rushed the cow, belonging to Manuel Vargaz, and stabbed it to death. Under the old property laws Peckham is liable to a two-year prison sentence and Vargaz may collect three times the value of the cow.

JUST A DRINKING TOWN

GREELEY, Colo.—(INS)—A new town may be incorporated south of Greeley for the special convenience of drinkers. The city voted against the sale of liquors having alcoholic content of more than 3.2 per cent. A movement is under way to incorporate a municipality as near as possible to Greeley, where liquor may be sold.

1,626 SHEEPISH TURNS

DENVER — (INS) — A special train bearing 1,628 twins, all born last February, arrived at the Denver livestock market. They were lambs from the herds of Charles E. Nicholson of Boise, Idaho. Sheepmen explained that normally about 40 out of every 100 ewes bear twins.

CHILDREN WANTED

BERLIN — (INS) — Any houseowner of Nuremberg who refuses to let rooms or flats to people with large families will be immediately arrested, it is announced. This is the latest move in the Nazi campaign to increase the population.

BLUE EAGLE HOMELESS

DENVER — (INS) — Thousands of printed "Blue Eagle" labels symbols of the late NRA, choked the furnaces in the postoffice building here when federal employees attempted to cremate the once-potent bird. Officials decided it would be best to tear them up and dispose of them as waste paper.

YOUTHS DENY PLEA OF GUILTY AND WILL STAND COURT TRIAL

Charged With Aggravated Assault and Battery and Assault and Battery

DIDN'T MAKE TROUBLE

Accused of Throwing Stones and Acting Disorderly
At Picnic

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 20.—Two Philadelphia youths, Joseph Jankowski and Steve Drozdowski, who pleaded guilty to charges of aggravated assault and battery before Judge William F.
Dannehower, of Montgomery county, in a session of miscellaneous court here yesterday, withdrew their pleas and will stand trial at the September session of criminal court.

The youths denied they came to a picnic at St. Valentine's picnic grounds in Bensalem township while under the influence of liquor on July 31. They were also charged by another witness of throwing stones during a Polish picnic.

Judge Dannehower permitted the youths to withdraw their pleas and enter pleas of not guilty upon motion of Assistant District Attorney Edward G. Biester.

Pleading guilty to a charge of assault and battery, Stanley Gocinski, of Langhorne, was sentenced by Judge Dannehower to pay the cost of prosecution and to serve forty days in the Bucks County Prison.

The defendant, who has been in prison since July 11 following his arrest, will be discharged probably within a day or two pending the payment of costs.

Judge Dannehower warned him about losing his temper and told him to be more careful of his conduct in the future.

John Melowski, of Forty-Fort, Luzerne county, who pleaded guilty to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, was sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution and serve 30 days in the county prison.

Patrolman T. P. Callahan, of the local sub-station of the State Highway Patrol, was the sole witness for the Commonwealth.

In the Court of Common Pleas, a master's report was filed in the divorce proceedings of Cecilia M. Mc-Elroy vs. Erwin McElroy.

Judge Dannehower presided in the absence of President Judge Hiram H.
Keller, who is abroad, and Judge Calvin S. Boyer, who is on his vacation in the New England States.

Long Funeral Journey By Air To End Today

MUD CAT OR KINGFISH

Ever since Senator Long surrendered to the demands of the flesh and abandoned his filibuster against the Administration's NRA legislation in June, there has been discussion among the savants of political biology as to whether the gentleman from Louisiana really belongs to the kingfish family or is after all a member of the large finny tribe of Mississippi River mudcat.

From time to time evidence has appeared that the kingfish of Louisiana is not always kingy. Memory runneth back, of course, to the famous battle of Sand's Point; to the declaration that a kingfish never took shelter under senatorial immunity for anything he said about any individual and the almost immediate amendment thereof when a certain former adjutant general of the United States prepared for action.

But those are ancient incidents. Perhaps they never happened. Perhaps they are only a part of the Huey myth. But here is something right in the day's news: "I'm not interested in all that speculation," said Senator Long on reports that President Roosevelt's tentative plans to visit Arkansas foretold a major New Deal-Long clash. Some months ago Long declared that he would go into Arkansas to battle against Senator Robinson's return to the Senate. Robinson must stand for re-election next year. But Huey, asked if he didn't still intend to beat the Senate leader at the polls, replied, "I have nothing to say."

Until the political biologists have expressed their judgment, mere laymen must hesitate, of course, to step in with opinion as to whether Senator Long there revealed the kingfish of Louisiana or a lowly mud cat, just trying to get along.

CALIFORNIA IS INSULTED

Uses of science to the contrary, we agree with Dr. C. C. Warn, general manager of the Hollywood humane department, that a halt should be called in California's revivification experiments.

"This work," says Dr. Warn, "is an absolute nuisance." So long as Dr. Ralph Willard merely theorized over the possibility that humans might be frozen alive and preserved in statu quo for a century, Dr. Warn raised no objection. But when 180 citizens offered themselves for the experiment, he stepped forth and said his piece.

Clearly his position is on high ground. Is California ready to concede that 180 of its sons and daughters would rather be frozen in a block of ice than continue to enjoy the California climate? Can it afford to tolerate the innuendo that life on this planet 100 years hence may be more worthwhile than living in California today? Dr. Warn thinks not. California thinks not. We think not. Nuisance is the proper word for it.

RETURNS CHARITY

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—If Diogenes were still seeking an honest man, local officials of the Volunteers of America announced, he could look up Moses Earl Jackson of Bangor, Me. In 1928 Jackson received some $11 worth of help—cash, food and clothing—while stranded in this city. The Volunteers were his benefactors. "I am now able to repay the loan," Jackson wrote recently. "My percentages may not be correct but I believe $20 will take care of the debt. Enclosed is the amount."

CHAPTER XXXVI

"One-Armed" Toole's surprise regarding the fleet of airplanes was correct in a vague way, although it failed to comprehend the whole magnificent truth. The air fleet, indeed, was the property of Maurice Sire and it did, in fact, bear a large part interested in the development. But the detective had caught only the naked structural lines in his conjecture. He and Bannister, playing important parts in the vast drama, themselves, did not know that it was approaching a climax which had been foreshadowed in the newspapers of the world for more than a week.

Toole had visualized the scheme in its material aspects alone, while Bannister, recognizing it as a splendid pioneer movement, was primarily interested in its romantic and adventurous sides. Neither dreamed of it as a vast and dignified economic experiment, embracing nothing short of an international social and political laboratory, a melting pot of Oriental races, a furnace alembic into which creed and political boundaries—with all their misunderstandings and hatreds—were to be cast, thence to emerge as a model for an ideal civilized state.

Secretly as the scheme had been working out for months, its real meaning finally had become known through the departure of an extra-official commission from Geneva, bound for the Sire Depression. This august body made up the passenger list of the air fleet that had passed over the heads of Toole and Bannister—passed over their heads in more than the obvious sense. Maurice Sire himself was a member of that commission, but it would be a mistake to say that he was at its head. All were equal.

At the very moment that Toole and Bannister gained the top of the gorge the air fleet was circling over a landing place in the desert one hundred miles to the east. It was only by luck or accident that Maurice Sire was first to step from his plane. Like a flock of doves the others settled down near a great white cross of cotton cloth that had been spread out for their guidance.

Yes, Maurice Sire had taken the field; not with the mailed fist, as Toole and Bannister might have expected, but bent upon a peaceful mission. He was not in quest of spoils. It was not gold and silver and platinum, jade and chrysolite that he sought. He had come to give, not to take. And his confreres were animated by the same purpose.

At a little distance from the white cross stood a circle of tall poles. Presently, from a huge pyramid of faggots that stood in the center of the circle, a white robed figure appeared—a man bent with years. He walked slowly around the pile, completing the circle, only to resume again in a wider arc. The commissioners stood waiting. Round and round the white robed man of mystery continued until his circumambulation brought him within a few feet of the motionless figures. Suddenly he spoke:

"And they shall come from the east and the west, and from the north and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God."

This he repeated three times. The men sat down upon the sand.

"And behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last."

The oracle turned and walked to the pile of faggots into which he cast a flaming brand. A pillar of fire arose. Calmly each of the men divested himself of some outer garment which distinguished his nationality and cast it into the flames.

Again the oracle spoke:

"But he shall receive now in this time, houses and brethren, and sisters and mothers, and children and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life."

The ceremony, agreed upon before the commission left Geneva, was completed. Almost magically hundreds of men and women appeared from hiding places on all sides, making their way toward the circle of poles.

"They're here to ratify the treaty," Sire volunteered, turning to his companions. "This ceremony may seem like folderol to some of you, but it is important to them. They and their forebears have lived in these hills for five hundred years, scratching a bare living out of the soil and getting nowhere. My friend, Abbe Bergere, devised the ritual under which we were made welcome. I think he borrowed most of it from Matthew, Mark and Luke. The whole design was to enable us jointly to occupy the valley, irrigate it and otherwise make it habitable for a large population. In the largest scheme, of course, it contemplates more than that—the idea of an experimental state in which all the Oriental nations will have a part."

Perhaps, when the turmoil now pervading the better known parts of the world subsides, more will be heard of the Sire Depression and its developments. At present the rattling of rock drills and the roar of steam shovels in action are echoed only against the desert hills. True, there has been some talk of a "lost river" in the territory, and a great deal of sanguine comment upon efforts to divert it to the parched valley.

"There's one thing I'm rather dubious about, Karen," said Maurice Sire, after the party had finished an air tour of the valley. "It was splendid of you to permit the sacrifice of all those old documents in the international fire but I think we cheated a little in the matter of the royal robe and the clasp and girdle."

Abbe Bergere was instantly alert. "Cheated?" he echoed, before Karen could answer. "Didn't I explain the whole situation to the patriarch of the hill people? Didn't he put it to a vote? Didn't they all agree that it was unnecessary to sacrifice the robe and girdle?"

"True," admitted Sire. "Our young friend Bannister didn't seem to care what happened to those ridiculous old scrolls, more than half of which were fiction and forgeries. But I do think his outcry against the destruction of the robe and girdle stimulated your eloquent appeal for their preservation. Anyway, Karen has them, but if she wants to keep them, I'd prefer that she'd do it in a house of her own."

Maurice Sire smiled. After all, he was merely waiting. A man who is suddenly dispossessed of first place in his daughter's affections has some remaining privileges and he was simply exercising them.

"We both made the sacrifice the hill people demanded," Karen reminded her father. "Didn't I abdicate all rights to the throne after you went through the same ceremony?"

"There's one disturbing thing about the business," Bannister remarked. "Here, Karen has a dyed-in-the-wool, blown-in-the-bottle genealogy, tracing a white ancestry back nearly five hundred years, while I've got to admit that the blood of Peahontas is running in my veins. I am practically a buck Indian. And she was afraid that I'd call her 'a little Chink!'"

Maurice Sire returned to the attack. "How do you expect to get that leopard pelt into the United States?" he asked. "What about the customs department?"

"Oh, well! I declare it as a trophy!" Bannister answered carelessly. "Anyway, it's Karen's now and we're not married yet. If you care to pay the duty on my appraisal of the robe and girdle—$200,000—that's your own affair."

Sire chuckled silently. "Where is the final ceremony to take place?" he asked, glancing at the Abbe.

"Right here, in this little chapel," Karen thrust in, "and the robe and girdle will be part of my wedding outfit. You know I never liked Dick much in formal dress, either. I remember his dinner coat—it didn't seem to set just right."

"It was Hod's," Dick admitted. "He has a fine, manly chest but it's at his waistline now. Then there's another little matter—we couldn't very well have Bully and Napoleon as witnesses to a wedding in the Fifth Avenue church, could we?"

"Even Mr. Toole wouldn't feel very comfortable as a best man in such a place," Karen supplied. "And, thank goodness, he's here now. That man has me distracted ever since he laid hands on Mr. Whinnle and the yale. Why should he have insisted upon flying back to Maure alone with the prisoners?"

"Oh, they were angrily trussed up and crated," Dick assured her. "I helped with that myself. It was the only service he would permit. He's 'Two-Armed' Toole again."

The detective had entered the hut as Bannister spoke. "These Britishers are great people," he said. "They had a warrant for Jeff and the valet on an old jewel robbery, so they took charge of them and guaranteed to deliver them in London. Since a murder charge takes precedence over robbery, we won't have any trouble in extraditing the bunch. Besides, Jeff was born in the United States. That bluff he made about being an Englishman was all hokey."

"Born in the United States?" queried Bannister.

"Yes, near New Orleans. So was Brenda," Toole leaned over and whispered something in Bannister's ear.

"No!" Bannister was incredulous.

"Yes," Toole insisted. "Jeff admitted it himself."

"What's all this?" Maurice Sire demanded.

Bannister strolled over and seated himself at his side. A few low spoken words brought a look of amazement to Sire's face. "No wonder the Whipples knew the potency of the bar sinister," he said. "Even the whisper chilled me when they tried to use it against Karen and me. For a time it tied my hands—paralyzed me."

"I'm glad you held out against blackmail," said Bannister, "but it must have cost you a lot of money to put over this big project in the Depression—money that will never come back."

Sire's eyes glowed. "Ten millions," he said laconically, adding: "I do not want it back. There is a better spirit abroad in the world these days. Thirty years ago men of wealth subscribed to the jocular wheeze that since posterity never did anything for them, they were under no obligations to posterity. Now the reverse is accepted. Big money is being made more and more by corporations and less and less by individual effort. The kick of purely personal achievement is lacking. The thrill comes now, not from the making and piling up of money, but in getting rid of it intelligently and morally. Foundations of all kinds are acorns from which the great oaks of the future may grow."

The Abbe had joined them on the bench. "A new prophet has come to the mountain," he interjected.

"What I have dreamed he has made a reality."

"Where's Brenda?" Toole asked, peering about.

The window was open and Karen pointed out toward the distant hills to the east.

"Oh, she decided to stay among the hill people, did she? I gave her the choice of doing that or going back to New York with Jeff as a prisoner. Not such a bad dame at that. Crazy about her own smartness, though. The first quarrel she had with Jeff was over the letter she wrote to Karen, pulling that stuff about the Sires being yellow."

"I think Brenda was throwing a vengeful eye toward Bannister."

"Yet she called Dick a yokel," Karen said.

"Of course!" Toole admitted sagely. "That's the way with these wild women. They stir up a man's interest by acting scornful at first it makes the poor duf."

"Oh, shut up!" Bannister growled.

"At any rate," Sire interposed, "Brenda denied that she had any idea that murder was to be done in connection with the Whipple Syndicate enterprise, and I believe her."

Toole had put on his derby and was walking out of the hut, but paused when Bannister called, "Hey Inspector!"

"Show him the message that the plane relayed to you, daddy," Karen pleaded. "Why wait?"

Toole read the sheaf of slips that Sire handed to him. His eyes dimmed a little as he finished the last one.

"Matt Boyle is a pretty good scout at that," he said.

MEMBERS AND FRIENDS OF LODGE TAKE PART IN A "COOTIE" PARTY

Plan Reception to Deputy Supreme Commander Next Month

A "cootie" party was conducted following the meeting of Shepherds Delight Lodge, in the lodge headquarters last evening. Five tables of players were arranged, and the following are high scorers: Mrs. Wesley Bunting, 370; Mrs. Alfred McLaughlin, 365; Mrs. Robert Patterson, 355; Mrs. David Neill, 340; William Walton, 288. Refreshments followed the social time. Due to lack of space in the homes of some members it was decided to confine the sessions of the committee in charge of the blanket club affairs to committee members only. These occur on the second and fourth Monday evenings of each month. The socials after the lodge meetings on the first and third Mondays will be open to the public, however. There will be no meeting on Labor Day; but on the 16th of September a reception will be tendered to the deputy supreme commander John Bireks, Philadelphia. Therefore the next social open to the public will be on October 7th.

BEHIND the SCENES in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD—Gratitude, the cynics say, is just as rare in Hollywood as on Broadway. Which makes it hard to account for such things as Bing Crosby's appearance on the Paul Whiteman radio broadcast. One of the country's biggest sponsors offered Crosby considerably more than the average man makes in a year to sing the five songs from his new picture, "Two for Tonight".

Bing turned down the offer. He'll do the same songs for Whiteman without pay—a friendly memory of the days when he was one of Paul's boys.

Binnie Barnes is worried over her aunt who lives, of all places right now, in Ethiopia. Her relative, Mrs. Rosina Noyce, is right in the danger zone. She and her husband conduct a mercantile establishment in Halle Selassie, empire. To complicate matters, if flight becomes necessary, they have six children.

Up in Sonora, Cal., the ranchers are gleefully telling the story. George O'Brien and the "Thunder Mountain" company were making scenes on location. Miners and ranchers in the vicinity had brought their entire families, including the babies, to see a movie in the making. The kids got so noisy Director David Howard finally had to call a halt.

He turned, and, in a pleading voice, addressed the audience: "We don't mind the grown-ups, but you folks must stop having babies up here."

What actor, in the quiet sixties, recently proposed to an actress, in the exciting teens, and got for his answer: "I want you to meet my grandmother sometime?"

You Asked Me and I'm Telling You! Gwen Tucker, San Francisco: Margaret Sullivan and Henry Fonda were married in 1931 when both were members of the University Players in Baltimore. They were divorced about a year later. Oddly enough, it was Fonda whom the movie scouts first spotted. Walter Wanger caught a performance of "Coquette" in which both Fonda and Margaret appeared in Mount Cisco, N. Y. He tried to interest Columbia in the young actor and failed. At the time, both players would have come to Hollywood for a total salary of $225 a week.

The Marx Brothers will stage an exodus as soon as their picture is finished at M. G. M. Chico goes to New York to start his daughter, Maxine, in her musical and dramatic education. Groucho also heads for Broadway. Harpo flies to Vermont where he owns part of an island in the lake district. His neighbors are Alice Duer Miller, Alexander Woolcott, R. H. Fischman, Neysa McMein, Charles MacArthur and Beatrice Kaufman.

In preparation for her Juliet, Norma Shearer has acquired and read 400 volumes on the Shakespearean tragedy. She has a copy of the stage version used by every famous Juliet for years back.

HOLLYWOOD TICKER-TAPE—

Will this be news to Hollywood? Joe Reilly, the police chief at the Fox studio under the Sheehan regime, has turned actor and put himself in the hands of an agent. Now that Jackie Coogan is back in town, he and Toby Wing have taken up their old friendship. They were at the Coconut Grove together the other night. . . . Incidentally, Alice Duer Miller, the radio singer, is a new entertainer at this spot. . . . Mrs. Jack Benny (Mary Livingstone) is off to Seattle to visit with home-town folk for the first time in three years. . . . The cinema's newest grill and cocktail room, being constructed at the Hotel

Mrs. Jack Benny

Roosevelt, will feature murals depicting the history of the film industry. . . . Including all the stars from John Bunny. . . . Maxine Lewis writes she is singing at the Country club at Lake Tahoe. . . . Alice Joyce will accompany Husband Clarence Brown to New England, where he will shoot location scenes for "Ah, Wilderness". . . . And little David Holt celebrated his eight birthday on the 14th.

CASEYS CLINCH HOLD ON LEAD POSITION

Annexing their eleventh straight victory of the second half campaign, the Caseys clinched the second session of the Bristol Twilight League last night, edging out a close win over the Hibernians on Leedom's field. Final score stood 3-1.

The tilt was a pitcher's battle between "Lucky Joe" Antonelli and "Happy" Hovatter with Hovatter being the winner. The Caseys twirled allowed the Hibs seven hits and kept them fairly well scattered. He had one bad inning, the first, in which the Hibs scored their only tally and had three runners on base when Happy fanned Roe to close the frame. Antonelli was saved for nine hits.

The Knights counted a tally in the first when Cooper doubled and successive hits were made by McDewitt, J. Cooper and Joseph Dougherty. Cooper was out at the plate on a close play but McDewitt scored on Dougherty's safe blow. The second tally for the winners came in the third when McDewitt singled to center, took third on a sacrifice by Dougherty and scored on a sacrifice by Cooper. The final run came in the sixth when W. Dougherty took two bases on an error by F. Dougherty and came home on Jones' double to center.

The Hibernians tallied in the first. With one gone, Ennis singled and Dougherty whiffed. Clay, Thompson and Brescia hit one-base blows, scoring Ennis. The bags were still loaded when Roe breezed.

Make County Allocations

Harrisburg, Aug. 20—County allocations for the first year of the state's $19,880,000 old-age assistance appropriations for the biennial period were announced today by Dr. J. Evans Scheele, secretary of welfare.

The first year's allocation total of $9,940,000, included Bucks County, $99,827.

Comeback Kid of the Chisox

By BURNLEY

The superiority of brains over brawn is being demonstrated for the benefit of skeptics every time that crafty veteran of the mound, Ted Lyons, toes the hurling hill.

Theodore, who is really ancient as moundsmen go, has to use the old bean in order to fool the husky sluggers of the younger generation, which feat he has been performing very successfully this season.

Master Lyons has twirled for the Chicago White Sox during his entire major league career, never being traded to any other club, and it must be said that he has twirled nobly for the Chisox cause. Last year, however, it was generally conceded that the old magic had departed from Ted's aging flipper, and the boys had the White Sox yet all ticketed for the w. k. bonanza.

Just to surprise everybody in general and the wisecracks in particular, Lyons refused to lie down in the baseball grave they had so thoughtfully dug for him, but instead he proceeded to stand the American League batters on their collective ears just as he was in the habit of doing when in his pitching heyday.

Really, it looks as if Foxy Grandpa Lyons is going to make this just about the best season of his long and scintillating career on the pitching rubber. All during the current campaign he has been the ace boxman of the surprising White Sox, and is credited by boss Jimmy Dykes as being the key man of the amazing spurt of the Pale Horse.

Dykes explains Lyons' grand comeback as being due to the fact that he let Theodore train himself this Spring.

Says James: "I told Ted that I wouldn't ask him to throw a ball until he came to me and asked to work. When he was ready to start, he had everything."

This was the first time that the veteran White Sox moundman was able to really take things easy in Spring training, and the successful results of this treatment are now apparent to everyone.

DANNY HINES PITCHES THIRD STRAIGHT VICTORY

"Danny" Hines pitched his third straight victory for the Landreth Seed-Packers last night at Englishtown, blanking the Jersey team, 5-0, in the Landrethmen's sixteenth victory of the campaign.

Hines was in superb form and allowed the Englishtown nine but three hits. These were kept well scattered and the Bristol hurler was never in danger of being scored upon. Only one fly was hit to the outfield by the Jerseyites, making but five fly balls hit to the outfield by visiting clubs in three games off the Landreth's twirler.

Hines was backed by adroit fielding by his mates. Four double-plays made in fast order pulled the "Farmers" through to victory. In thirty-seven tries, only one error was chalked against the seedsmen.

Tonight the locals play the Woodbury Aviators at Woodbury while Saturday, the Seed-Growers play the Media A. A. team on Leedom's field.

25-YEAR-OLD PLANE TO FLY

By International News Service

GALLIPOLIS, O. — (INS) — Spectators at a carnival here, August 25, will witness attempts of the once-famous Lincoln Beachy "pusher plane" to take to the air again.

It was exactly 23 years ago that Lincoln Beachy, most noted aviator of his day, ascended the air-minded world by racing through the air here at a mile-a-minute clip in an out-standing aerial feat of 1912.

Now—23 years later—the plane, resembling a cross between a mammoth box-kite and a dragon fly, has been "resurrected" from a museum, its bolts tightened and gears repaired to fly though the air above the town where it first gained fame.

The relic, powered by a 750-horsepower, S-cylinder motor, will be piloted by Capt. Clarence McArthur of Tampa, Fla.

of Mechanicsville, won a gold medal for the afternoon outfit which she had made. Grace Angeny, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Angeny of Danboro and Esther Yothers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Yothers, of Bedminster Township, won gold medals in the class of outfits for street wear.

These gold medals were awarded to all entrants whose garments scored above 90% on workmanship and attractiveness when worn by the girl, in addition to correct selection of accessories, such as hat, purse, gloves, hose and shoes.

The girls attending Leadership School who went to the College on Monday, August 12th, were: Lela Rice, Carversville Clothing Club; Marie Moll, New Britain Borough Baking Club; Naomi Palmer, Emma Moyer, and Catherine Reitter of the Kellers Church Baking Club; Grace Angeny of the Danboro Clothing Club; and Mildred Shelly of the Plumstead Clothing Club. These girls participated in the discussions on problems of leadership and assisted in conducting the Club Week program which began on Wednesday morning. They were chaperoned by Miss Margaret Angeny of Danboro.

The girls attending the Club Week activities left Bucks County on Wednesday morning in five machines as follows:

Jane Kramer and Dorothy Wolfinger of the Plumstead Room Improvement Club were accompanied by Miss Hildegard Hanisch, local school teacher, and Miss Mary Emma Hunsberger, local leader of the Plumstead-ville Club.

Frances Orr and Margaret Lapp of the New Britain Baking Club were chaperoned by Mrs. Norman Lapp, local leader.

erine Benner of the Springtown Baking Club were driven to the College by Mr. Frank DeSilver of Springfield Township.

Florence and Esther Yothers, along with Marie Heston and Mabel Satterthwaite of the Edgewood Club were driven to the College by Mr. Lando K. Moyer, school teacher in Bedminster Township.

Mildred Beer and Jean Wyllie were accompanied by the Misses Clara and Viola Johnson, also Bedminster Township school teachers, and local leaders for the Kellers Church Baking Club.

These local leaders assisted the girls in the various activities. A fitting climax to the announcement of awards made to the Assembly on Friday evening was the award of $3 to the Bucks County girls for the Mother Goose Pantomime which they presented at the Assembly program. All of the girls took part in the characterization of the 15 nursery rhymes, for which Grace Angeny was Mother Goose and Esther Yothers, the Old Lady in the Shoe.

Eleven Bucks County girls gave a demonstration on cake making before the entire Home Economics 4-H members in attendance at Club Week, on Friday morning. They were divided into four teams as follows: Team 1, Marie Moll, Frances Orr and Mabel Satterthwaite; Team 2, Naomi Palmer, Grace Angeny, and Mildred Shelly; Team 3, Emma Moyer, Catherine Reitter and Frances Orr; Team 4, Margaret Wambold, Peggy DeSilver and Cicely DeSilver. Bucks County was one of five counties providing demonstrations in Baking, Girls' Book Shelf, Clothing Playlet and Flower Arrangement.

Infant Rushed to Hospital

Philadelphia, Aug. 20—Flown here from his home 800 miles away, two-year old Donald Gittleton today was prepared for a bronchoscopic operation at Temple University Hospital, to remove a one-inch long screw lodged in the tube entering his right lung. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gittleton, farm owners of near Plainfield, Ill.

BOXERS TO BE PICKED HERE FOR PHILA. BOUTS

Fighters competing in the amateur boxing show sponsored by the St. Ann's Athletic Association in its open air arena, Monday evening, August 26, will have a chance to participate in the Junior Golden Glove Tournament to be held in the Arena, Philadelphia, during the week of September 10.

This announcement was made by match-maker Sammy Moffo today as he is making preparations with the Middle Atlantic district office of the Amateur Athletic Union. It is the intention of Moffo to pick at least ten boxers from the next two boxing shows here and let them represent St. Ann's of Bristol in the Golden Glove tournament which is held yearly under the supervision of a Philadelphia newspaper.

Ten bouts will be given to the public at the Monday evening boxing exhibition. The boys representing organizations of Bristol and vicinity will be pitted against amateur mittmen from Philadelphia. The boxing officials represented at the last boxing show here were well satisfied with the conduct of the spectators as well as the exhibitions put on by the novices from Bristol.

Tonight the fighters will meet at the St. Ann's clubhouse to receive instructions for the next show and this is the final date for the signing of fighters for the Monday night bouts.

Boxing Exhibitions At Recreation Center

Boxing exhibitions were conducted yesterday morning for the amusement of the children at the recreation center sponsored by the W. P. A. at the headquarters of St. Ann's club.

Winners are here announced: Rick Calone winner over Arthur Straffe in two rounds; draw in two round contest between Joe Ferraro and Tim Mancino; Joe Calone won over Benny Fusco in a two-round bout; contest between Len Felt and Jimmy DiPardo ended in a draw. In a five minute wrestling match Joe Conti and Ken Dyer finished in a draw.

The programs for the remainder of this week follow:

Wednesday—Children: Assembly, flag salute, puppet show, "Scarecrow" handwork. Adults: Assembly, flag salute, play practice, swimming instructions, life saving, diving.

Thursday—Children: Assembly, flag salute, children with signed consent of parents to be taken to the river for swimming instructions. Adults: Assembly, nature study hike ("doggie" roast).

Friday—Children: Pet show: largest, smallest, funniest, most original, oldest, youngest, cleanest, mut. Adults: Assembly, demonstration by Bucks County Rescue Squad; handwork.

Claude W. Lodge, 24, Huntington Valley, and Iris O. Lutz, 22, Perkasee. Fred H. Detrick, 35, of 4111 Walnut street, Philadelphia, and Hannah Lee Griffith, 27, of 4224 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

EDGELY AND HULMEVILLE TO CROSS BATS TONIGHT

Tonight on the Edgely diamond, the Edgely Braves will cross bats with the Hulmeville club in the game which may decide the second half championship of the Lower Bucks County League. On Leedom's field, the Hibernians will play the Odd Fellows. In a Bristol Twilight League contest, the Caseys will go after their twelfth straight, meeting the Edgely A. C. at Tullytown.

Howard Black will toe the slab against the boys of Fred Hibbs in the Edgely-Hulmeville tilt. Quite a bit of rivalry exists here because of the several difficulties which have severed the relations of the players of both clubs. Manager Hibbs will use Jake Praul against the Blackmen. Praul has been driven from the mound in his last two appearances and is aching for one more chance against the league-leaders.

"Patty" Lyzack is expected to twirl for the Hibs against the Oddies, with Bob Sutton sending Harry Minster against his foes. The Hibs scored a close victory over the boys of Sutton in their last meeting. A victory for the Hibs will keep them in the second half race while a defeat eliminates them.

Games are scheduled to begin at 6.30 o'clock.

Parents Wanted Rogers to Become Minister in Youth

ipped a coin to see who would go. Will lost. His pal returned to the United States, leaving Will stranded in Buenos Aires.

He could have worked his way home, but he decided to stick it out and see more of the world. So he worked on the Pampas, mixed with the gauchos, and learned a great deal. He said afterwards:

"I thought I knew something about roping, but I didn't. Those Argentine vaqueros were sho' the most wonderful experts with a rope that I have ever seen."

Here again we have an example that he was not the typical American—the typical American has not roped steers on the Argentine Pampas.

Then Will heard of the Boer war. He immediately got a job on a cattle boat transporting mules from Buenos Aires to South Africa in order that he might engage in the conflict.

The story of what happened when he got there is best told in Will's own language:

"So I worked my way to South Africa on a cattle boat, but when I got there the Boer war was all over—so I joined up with a little wild West show, doing a ropin' act."

"From South Africa I went to Australia, where I worked with the Wirth shows, owned by Mae Wirth's daddy. Then I went to Japan and China, and then to San Francisco, and from there I hummed my way home, and a feller told my dad he didn't think I had done so well because he heard I came home wearing overalls for underdrawers."

(In the second installment, Brown will tell of Will's amusing courtship, his marriage, and his early vaudeville career.)
